Dr. Svend Heiberg, the Danish physician reported as having left Bornholm for Poland is now, according to a dispatch from Berlingske Tidende's Bonn correspondent, living in East Germany where he was brought by German fishermen. His exact residence and circumstances are not known in Danish circles in Berlin.

Since he is a private individual who has voluntarily gone behind the Iron Curtain and since there are no demands for his repatriation, said the Bonn correspondent, official Danish authorities in Berlin are no longer concerning themselves with the matter.

So far as is known at present, the correspondent said, Heiberg is at liberty and is presumably practicing his profession. While he was being investigated by the East German authorities and the Russian occupation forces, the correspondent added, he was detained at the Dreibergen-Buetzow prison in Mecklenburg, and was there probably about 3 or 4 weeks. The dispatch added that according to all indications he was granted a residence and work permit very quickly.
